

In the debate on the Alton Bill, the main issue has been forgotten...

ABORTION MEANS RACE SUICIDE

DESPITE all the current opposition to it — from the rowdy lefty, rentamob demonstrators to the Prime Minister himself — David Alton's Abortion Bill which has recently been approved by a majority in the House of Commons is a pathetic compromise, a weak and flabby piece of legislation that is wholly inadequate to deal with the evil that Abortion represents.

The weakness of the bill, however, did not prevent the scum of the political underworld hitting the streets to campaign against it and in defence of continued abortion on demand. Noticeably also, when it came to the crunch, all the party leaders — Neil Kinnock and David Steel as well as Mrs. Thatcher — closed ranks in agreement with the leftist rabble outside parliament to vote against the bill.

NO BAN PROPOSED

The Alton Bill does not propose any sort of blanket ban on abortion on demand, and for what are described as 'social' reasons. This seems to mean that it is accepted that people can indulge in unrestricted irresponsible sex without having to worry about the consequences. All the bill aims to do is restrict the legal limit for abortions by reducing it from 28 weeks of pregnancy to 18 weeks. As things are, only a small portion of abortions are in fact carried out after 18 weeks anyway, so the Alton Bill will make very little difference to the present mass-destruction of perfectly healthy children in the womb.

But despite the inadequacy of the bill, it has not stopped it being attacked by the hugely powerful forces that stand behind the 'permissive society' and which were from the beginning behind the campaign to relax the abortion laws back in the 1960s. These forces pulled out all stops to oppose and condemn Mr. Alton's proposal. The 'liberalisation' of the law on Abortion — ironically as a result of a private member's bill sponsored by present Liberal leader David Steel — was part of a whole parcel of social changes that broke down morality and made for sexual license, and all during the years of Harold Wilson's Labour Government from 1964 to 1970.

In those years, not only was Abortion made legal, but the law was changed to allow homosexual acts between 'consenting adults', pornography became rampant, and unlimited sex (so-called 'free love') became the order of the day.

Sexual permissiveness was paralleled by an attack on the British birth-rate. The idea of birth control was constantly pushed, being justified by reference to a so-called global 'population-explosion'. In fact even then, let alone now, there was certainly no such population explosion among the native British. The result of all this has been the weakening of marriage and the family, and a further fall in the number of children born to British parents.

CATASTROPHE

The fall in the British birthrate in recent times has in fact been a racial catastrophe for us. Our rate of births today is not even at proper replacement level, and this decline in national fertility is resulting in an ever-increasing proportion of society consisting of old people — and this at a time when the coloured races of the world, including those here in Britain, are breeding faster than ever before. Abortion has been a major cause, though not the only cause, of this fall. It is estimated that about 350,000 births in Britain have been prevented by abortion, and most of these births would have been to white British mothers of good, healthy Anglo-Saxon or Celtic stock. Abortion, to our people, is in fact becoming race suicide!

At no time since the start of this decline in births, and of the 'permissive society' of which it is a part, has any government, Tory or Labour, done anything to stop the rot. Least of all has Mrs. Margaret Thatcher, the vaunted 'champion of traditional morality', shown the guts to lift a finger in this direction.

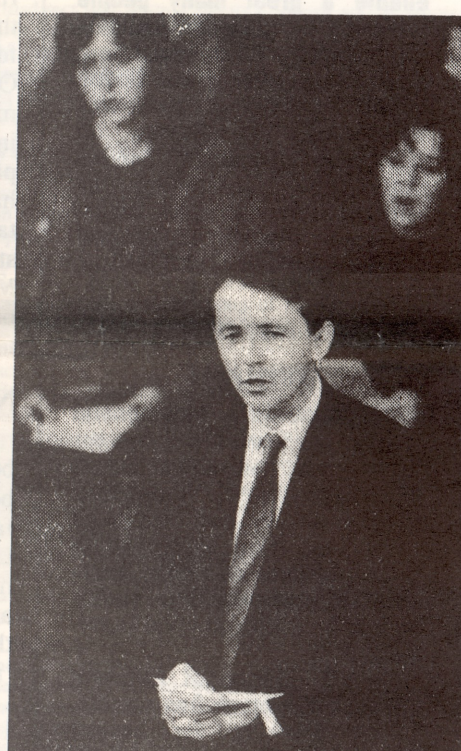

Now things have reached the point

AGAINST LIFE
The familiar 'Rentamob' demonstrate against the Alton Bill where, if so much as a suggestion is made that any change, however minor, be introduced to restore morality in this country, the permissive lobby — if necessary, backed by street mobs — will undertake by any means, however vicious, to silence those supporting that change. Hence the aggression against

Multi-racial Britain degenerating into criminals' paradise

ONE THING should now be obvious to anyone in Britain with half an ounce of common sense.

It is that the much vaunted 'multi-racial' experiment, backed by all the mainstream political parties and leaders over the past 30 years, has utterly failed.

This is clear from the fact that all of Britain's inner city riots have taken place in areas of ethnic minority concentration and have mainly involved members of those minorities.

It is also clear from the fact that certain racial minority elements are represented in many major categories of crime out of all proportion to their numbers.

There is no doubt whatever that the collapse of law and order in Britain has a major 'ethnic' component. Nor is there any doubt that things are steadily getting worse.

The recent case of the 'Stockwell Strangler', which horrified the nation, is merely one prominent example of the involvement of certain members of ethnic minority groups in some of the most bestial crimes. Of course, we accept that there are many perfectly law-abiding members of these ethnic minorities, who deplore these crimes as much as we do, and it would be absolutely wrong to allow our disgust at the crimes to turn into a general hatred of coloured immigrant racial groups.

Nevertheless, the brutal FACTS about ethnic minority participation in the soaring crime rate — and particularly some of the most inhuman types of crime — will not go away. And it would be disastrous if we failed to take these facts into account when assessing the correctness or incorrectness of the policy of making Britain a multi-racial society.

OFFICIAL WEAKNESS

Apart from the basic issue of this policy itself, there is another factor which weighs heavily in the reckoning: this is the abysmal WEAKNESS of our ruling politicians and many leading judges, magistrates and police chiefs in dealing with the manifestations of racial minority crime.

Far too many coloured criminals have received ridiculously inadequate sentences in the courts — in no small part the result of members of the bench being prepared to mitigate their criminal acts by making allowance for the so-called 'deprivation' they are supposed to suffer in terms of economic, educational and social 'disadvantages'. In addition to this, senior police officers, no doubt acting in accordance with political directives, have employed what can only be regarded as pussyfooting methods in dealing with inner city riots — methods quite clearly influenced by their desire not to do anything that would upset the powerful 'race relations' lobby, mainly controlled by ethnic minority groups.

Racial minority criminals, for their part, are fully aware that, where they in particular are concerned, the government has gone soft. They can hardly help being conscious of how those in authority today lack the guts and the will to hold Britain together in the face

WE MUST BE MAD

THE ISSUES involved in the collapse of Britain's Health Service are much more complex than is admitted by the present spokesmen and -women of HM Opposition, and it would need more space than is available here to go into them in the detail that is justified. We may, however, be permitted comment on just one aspect of the problem which most people think is the most glaring one: lack of money.

The government is at the present very pompously pronouncing that it does not intend just to pump more money into public health when, with so many services currently being run with minimum efficiency, that money may go to waste.

All very well. But is this government a paragon when it comes to the avoidance of wastage of public money?

Not exactly — when we consider that currently it is giving away £1,300 million a year in aid to the Third World.

The reallocation of this money to the care of sick people in Britain would not itself remedy all the problems of the National Health Service.

But it most certainly would enable a great many people presently dying in our hospitals to be saved. And it would be a start in convincing the British public that the government was determined to allocate all resources to the Health Service that could reasonably be allocated without other essential needs of public expenditure being neglected.

WHAT BELONGS TO WHOM?

WITH Australia's bicentennial much in the news lately, we are hearing a lot from, and on behalf of, that country's Aborigines about how their land was taken away from them by the white British settlers and why, therefore, it is wrong that there should be any such bicentennial festivities.

This is worthy of comment because the issue has ramifications that go far beyond Australia.

There is in fact not a single square foot of land on the surface of this planet that belongs to any people or race by 'right'; all land belongs to those who have been able to conquer it, occupy it, defend it and develop it. It is time that this truth got home to all of us and we stopped yapping and whining in sympathy with those who have lost out in the application of this natural law.

It is a harsh and perhaps brutal law which some people may be too delicate-minded to accept. But it is nonetheless the law by which all life on this earth has evolved forward.

We do not occupy Britain by any divinely-bestowed 'right'; we occupy it because our ancestors fought for it.

And we will assuredly lose Britain in times to come unless we are prepared to fight to defend our ownership of it with the same ruthlessness and the same singleness of purpose.

OUR BUSINESS

THE IRISH GOVERNMENT is said to be very upset at Britain's refusal to prosecute members of the RUC said to have employed a shoot-to-kill policy towards known IRA terrorists in Ulster.

In response to this, the duty of our own government is clear: it is to tell Dublin that what goes on in Ulster is OUR business and not Eire's.

LAST GASP OF THE OLD GANG

DURING JANUARY, the assortment of oddities making up the parties of the peculiarly named Liberal/SDP 'Alliance' staged a fine performance, worthy of the best theatrical farce, in their ongoing merger-talks saga.

By merging their previously separate parties into one, the Liberals and the Social Democrats (or at least those of their leaders who want anything to do with the whole business) are trying to 'con' the British electorate that they will become some sort of great 'new force' in British politics, capable of taking on the Tories and winning enough 'moderate' support from Labour voters and other anti-Thatcherites to provide a credible alternative to the Tory government.

The media have already focussed plenty of attention upon the farcical surface details of the clashes between the personalities involved in the drama. We have had SDP leader Robert McLennan and Liberal leader David Steel patching together a policy document which Steel's supporters then denounced. McLennan and Steel then disowned their own agreement within 24 hours of making it, embarrassingly failing to attend their own press conference. We then saw the two great statesmen come back with a Mark II policy declaration which was largely a fudged and muddled version of the first. The Liberal rank and file accepted the new proposals, but McLennan's former boss, ex-SDP leader Dr. David Owen — who hates the whole idea of merging with the Liberals and has been in a huff ever since this first became his party's policy — did not. McLennan hastened over to Owen's home to try to talk him round, but was ejected into the street within five minutes. As fast as McLennan and Steel glued new bits onto their flimsy cardboard structure of a party, other bits fell off.

NO 'NEW FORCE'

Not so much attention, however, has been given to the background reality behind the foreground slapstick. In fact, the whole idea that, even if the Liberals and Social Democrats do manage to cobble together some sort of a united party, it is a total illusion to think that it will represent any kind of 'new force' in British politics.

Most of the policies in both the Mark I and Mark II documents have to do with no issue more radical than how the economy should best be tinkered with in order to bribe the maximum number of voters to put their 'x's next to the name of the new party on their ballot papers. Indeed, the main objection by the Liberals to the Mark I policy document was that its proposals for VAT on food, fuel and children's clothing, and the abolition of mortgage income tax relief (which are of course crazy ideas on any showing) would cost votes!

The only other issue to figure prominently in the argument was defence. The Mark I document contained a Tory-style commitment to the American-controlled Trident nuclear missile system. In response to the howls of the Liberal anti-nuclear freaks who want Britain totally disarmed, this was dropped in the Mark II document to make way for some vaguely worded statement on nuclear weapons that did not make it clear how much in the way of nuclear armaments the new party would want Britain to have, if any. And both documents carried an unequivocal endorsement of this country's continued membership of the American-dominated NATO alliance.

Nowhere in any of the thinking of the Liberals or Social Democrats is there one single idea which represents any sort of radical break with the established political thinking of the past 40-odd years or the established framework of political debate. On the question of poverty, for example, all that the two parties can come up with is a vague and unspecified commitment in some way "to reform the tax and social security systems."

This has nothing whatever to do with getting to the root causes — the whole

Scotland, Wales and the various regions of England. This would naturally tend to subvert Britain's national unity, and it just so happens that the idea fits in very neatly with of these vital, and truly radical, national reforms from the sort of people who run either the Liberal Party or the SDP, whether acting separately or as a single party. The nation will in fact get nothing substantially different from what the Tory and Labour parties have, between them, been inflicting on us since the last war.

The Liberal/SDP merger represents no new hope for Britain

Alliance merger in disarray

THE MERGER DUO — AS SEEN IN THE DAILY TELEGRAPH

meaning of the word 'radicalism' — of poverty in Britain. The major such cause is mass unemployment. The near 3 million on the dole today are without work because Britain has been committed by all her governments since the war, regardless of party labels, to the international economic system, desired by the cosmopolitan sharks of world finance on Wall Street and in the City of London, within which our home market has been thrown open to uncontrolled imports of foreign manufactured goods. Yet the Liberals and SDP propose no break whatever with this system.

NO CHANGE ON COMMON MARKET

Similarly, across the whole range of policy, no new direction is proposed at all. The Liberals and SDP are both alike fanatically pro-Common Market. Common Market rules forbid Britain taking steps to stop the imports that are ruining her industries. Common Market membership ties us hand and foot to the international system.

In fact, the final Liberal/SDP policy document proposes that elected parliaments should be set up in

THE LIBERAL 'LEADER' Steel by name but not by nature, he showed all the resolution of a cold blancmange made much play with objections that have little real substance and, even where they do have some validity, can easily be overcome by any rational and intelligent modification of the old abortion laws. For example, the case is quoted of grossly deformed foetuses which cannot be detected until 24 weeks into pregnancy (well over the period proposed by Mr. Alton), and it is claimed that this would mean the birth of some handicapped children. But this in no way amounts to an argument in favour of abortion on demand.

Such exceptional circumstances can easily be catered for by allowance for special abortions to be given to women whose would-be children come into this category. Also, exceptions could be made in cases where, on properly qualified medical advice, the life or health of the mother-to-be is likely to be gravely endangered by birth. Last but not least, a further exception could be made in cases where the pregnancy is the result of rape.

All such contingencies are covered by the policy for the restoration of the abortion laws as proposed by the British National Party.

Among the so-called 'social reasons' sometimes given for abortions is that of the poverty of parents. But under a nationalist government the economic circumstances of the whole nation would be drastically altered for the better, at the same time as the present decay of morality was reversed. As part of the new climate, parents would be relieved of the present economic disincentives to have children, and public policy would be to encourage a high national birthrate — counterbalanced by a high rate of emigration to the countries of the White Commonwealth.

In summary, the Alton Bill is a pathetic compromise which totally fails to tackle the abortion issue effectively. Only a full-scale restoration of the old abortion laws (with the exceptions that have been stated) will suffice to restore morality to the nation and at the same time prevent the eventual biological extinction of the British people.

POLITICAL NO-HOPERS

Of the characters involved in the merger farce, the Liberal Party consists largely of left-leaning cranks whose political ideas are pretty much as lunatic as those of the revolutionary marxists who now control Neil Kinnock's Labour Party. It has its powerful CND brigade, as well as a generous quota of 'anti-racist' and 'anti-apartheid' nut-cases. If these sorts of Liberals differ at all from Labour's 'loony left', it is only in that they lack the naked raw viciousness of the latter in their pursuit of power.

As for the SDP, its leaders are just failed Labourites (some of them, like Dr. Owen, former ministers in the Callaghan government of the 1970s), who quit the Labour Party as it fell to the 'hard left'. By doing this, all they proved was that, like all our other establishment politicians, they simply lacked the guts to stand and fight the red 'nasties'. No matter with whom such failures as these people choose to join forces, they certainly will not produce success for Britain! The Liberals and SDP have nothing to offer but more of the same stale and poisonous old wine — served up in new bottles.

WHAT IS NEEDED

It is certainly true that Britain vitally needs a new force in her political life that will represent an effective opposition to Mrs. Thatcher and the Tories, who have brought nothing but disaster on us in their nine years of office. But to be worth anything such an opposition must junk all the ideas, attitudes and policies common to all the established political parties — Tory, Labour, Liberal and SDP alike — which have combined to bring us to near national ruin.

Internationalism, multi-racialism and liberalism (small 'l') — the political stock-in-trade of the old gang of politics must go. Now is the time for a truly new vision of Britain: the vision of nationalism In that vision lies our only hope.

TOO TRUE!

"The greatest breach of all democratic principles perpetrated in this country this century was the series of covert decisions, all taken against the popular will, which resulted in this country becoming a multi-racial society...If anything, the liberal media allowed itself to become part of the conspiracy, playing down the facts so as not to arouse too much public opposition. To all intents and purposes, the creation of a multi-racial society was a liberal coup d'etat, and to this day it has never been legitimised by any convincing constitutional process."

SPREADING THE WORD

Facts and views the media try to suppress

BRITAIN TODAY is like a country under enemy occupation. News and opinions that are considered 'dangerous' to the occupying power are rigorously suppressed by the established communications media: the press, broadcasting and the motion picture and publishing industries. A particularly important example of this is the organised black-out of the voice of white native British protest against alien immigration and the multi-racial society that our political masters have planned for us. Another matter for suppression is public discussion of the power and influence wielded in our society by persons and pressure groups of alien origin not owing first loyalty to the British nation. Free debate over these matters is carefully excluded from TV, radio and the columns of the newspapers.

In addition to these 'gags' by the media, laws have been passed through parliament whose purpose has been to silence ordinary British people who wish to speak out on such subjects as these we have mentioned. These laws have been presented as measures to combat 'race hate'; in reality they are laws aimed at silencing patriotic Britons in their resistance to the alien take-over of their country.

Nevertheless, resistance to the take-over is growing, and those leading that resistance refuse to be silenced. The British National Party, which is gradually becoming the main force of patriotic resistance in Britain, is building its own communications network for reaching, informing and rallying the British people. Available through this network are books, periodicals, leaflets, posters, stickers and tape recordings all of which convey vital information now being hidden from the people by the big battalions of the mass media. In this broadsheet we are advertising the items that are available. Do your bit for Britain by obtaining them and helping spread the message to others!

of any challenge from them that is sufficiently aggressive. Knowing this, it is hardly to be wondered at that they grow bolder and more arrogant all the time.

One example of how the rot has set in as a result of this government weakness and cowardice is the recently reported appearance in this country of the black mafia-style crime syndicate known as the 'Yardies'. Originating in Jamaica, where it is said to have been responsible for 500 murders during the island's 1980 election campaign, this gang is thought to be behind a huge number of crimes involving drugs and prostitution within the West Indian community in Britain, which have led already to 33 killings in this country.

Yet the man known to the police to be the leader of the Yardies is said to be living openly at addresses in South London, the government apparently being too frightened to deport him to Jamaica for fear of offending the ethnic minorities and their powerful and noisy spokesmen among black and white politicians.

Many will ask how this alien gangster element could have been allowed to get a foothold in this country, especially under a prime minister who is always prattling on about 'law and order' and 'strengthening the police'. Well, according to the Daily Mail: "Until now the Yardies have been a very sensitive subject with police. Senior officers did not want to risk offending black communities by alerting the public to the dangers of the exclusively West Indian syndicate."

Knowing that police policy in such matters is always, as we have said, determined in accordance with political directives, we can confidently say that this timidity is the result of a policy decided upon by the government.

STEAMING

Another example of the escalating collapse of law and order is the new phenomenon of 'steaming'. This is the name given to a kind of massed mugging, the idea of which has been imported from the ghettos of New York, where mobs of mainly black youths took to roaming the streets and robbing people in large gangs of 30 or 40 in number. Steaming gangs (known as 'posses') in London, Birmingham, Bristol and Liverpool have discovered, not only that this method of mugging is highly lucrative, but also that there is safety in numbers for those who engage in it. It cannot be stopped by ordinary constables operating in ones or twos but can only be combatted by large bodies of police operating mob-handed — something which police chiefs, faithful to the will of their political masters, are most reluctant to allow.

One steamer, identified only as 'Leroy', from Peckham (SE London), bragged to the press: "If you mug someone, it's you against them. But if there are 20 or 30 of you, no-one has a chance. The police cannot beat us because there are too many of us. For every one they put away, another posse is formed."

Detective Inspector Alan Hillman, head of the Notting Hill Carnival crime unit, describes the ferocity of some of the steamers' attacks as 'frightening'. One young man mugged in the vicinity of the Carnival was tripped to the ground by ten black youths who repeatedly kicked and punched him, as well as robbing him. He now fears that he may lose the sight of one eye as a result.

Another victim, from Lambeth (SW London), described his ordeal: "They just came at me; most of them were black, and they made this strange sort of chanting noise, like Zulus."

Describing steamers as 'bold and arrogant', Metropolitan Police Commissioner Imbert claimed in a public statement that "every step will be taken to stamp out this vicious crime." However, many of Imbert's senior officers feel that steaming represents a stepping up of violent street robbery which will defeat the present level of police resources available to tackle it. Nor does there seem to be any confidence in the will of the government to provide the training and equipment necessary for the purpose.

BLACK AND WHITE UNEQUAL IN LAW

None of what we say here is to minimise those categories of crime in which Whites are predominantly the culprits. Football hooliganism is one of the worst examples of these.

But at the end of the day we do not observe the same kind of pussyfooting by the authorities in dealing with manifestations of white crime, such as football hooliganism, as has become routine in handling crime in which there is a dominant 'ethnic' factor. This is despite the fact that the mindless yobbery of football hooligans, unpleasant though it is, is hardly on the same level as the methodical thuggery of steamers, and even more of the Yardies, who use lethal armed violence to gain their ends.

It is quite clear that, as we have said before, there is one law for Whites and another law for Blacks in this country today. And it is black criminals who are being allowed most outrageously to get away lightly from breaking the law.

That such a policy must be carried out in the interests of 'race relations' is itself, surely, the biggest testimony to the failure of the multi-racial experiment in Britain. It is time that that experiment was ended and our country began taking steps to restore the ethnic homogeneity of these islands by means of a massed repatriation policy. Such a policy is not only necessary in the interests of the indigenous population (which should rightly take precedence over all others) but it is also desirable in the interests of the law-abiding members of the ethnic minority groups, who are likely, if things go on as they are, to suffer a massive native backlash as a result of the crimes of some of their kin. Should this happen, it would not be just; but it would be an occurrence that would cause us no surprise if the present madness of multi-racialism is not firmly stopped — and stopped soon!

A RECENTLY REPORTED CASE — just one among many thousands — perhaps illustrates most perfectly why the forces of evil and criminality are today winning the battle in Britain against those of righteousness and order.

In one of the most horrifying incidents of its kind ever to come to our attention, a 14-year-old schoolgirl was the victim last month of a cold-blooded triple rape after being abducted to a London suburb. The young girl, from the North East of England, was on a secret day-trip to London, without her parents' knowledge or consent, because she wanted to see one of her favourite actors star in a pantomime.

After leaving the show, she got lost in Central London during the late evening trying to find Kings Cross Station for the journey home. At this stage she was approached by two men, described as Bangladeshi, who offered to help her. But instead of taking her to Kings Cross, they tricked her into accompanying them to a house in a South London suburb, without her having the least suspicion where she was going or what their real intentions were. Once she was in the house, the men forcibly plied her with strong drink.

One of the men then raped and otherwise sexually abused the girl before throwing her out onto the street in the small hours of the morning. Drunk, lost and in tears, she wandered the streets of the very dangerous and down-at-heel area where she was stranded, appealing to passers by for help. Eventually, two men in a car, described as of Cypriot or other Mediterranean appearance, stopped and picked her up, saying that they would "look after" her.

The two drove the girl into a dark side-street, where they both raped her in the back of their vehicle. They then dumped her.

Police finally found her at 3.30 in the morning.

Afterwards, one detective said: "I have never come across a case where such an innocent young girl is raped, and then raped again by men she goes to for help."

BRITAIN 1988

So now things have come to this. The state of Britain today is such that a helpless little innocent like this 14-year-old girl can find herself like a lamb thrown among wolves, with no-one to aid or protect her from such an appalling fate.

35 or so years ago, such a crime of cold-blooded rape against a defenceless child would have been unthinkable. There still existed, more or less everywhere in Britain, a self-respecting community, where some sort of public spirit still predominated and where, for example, it would have been quite normal for ordinary by-standers to back up police in carrying out an arrest. The decent citizenry largely set the tone within that community, and the vast mass of the population, and public opinion as a whole, would have been at one in expecting law and public and private decency to be upheld as a matter of course.

In these circumstances, even the worst of our home-grown criminals would have thought twice about

YOUR LETTERS

Sir, — Your October 1987 issue reported that the Leicester City Council was guilty of racial discrimination against white job applicants. Your readers may be interested to know that the council has agreed to pay an out-of-court settlement of £500 to one of the victims, Mr. Gordon McDonagh.

The settlement is supposed "to reflect injury to feelings" and to cover legal costs. The reality is that those responsible for the injustice against Mr. McDonagh have neatly avoided the consequence of facing a tribunal for racial discrimination and it is the unwitting local taxpayer who has to pay the £500.

Mr. McDonagh, who now has a job in a Leicester store, said: "I feel I have achieved my objective in getting the council's employment code changed." Indeed the council has agreed to make a slight change in its code which now guarantees interviews to Whites as well as Blacks and Asians.

The injustices perpetrated against native Britons are widespread in many areas of council policy, and £500 or £5,000 cannot possibly "reflect injury to feelings" of the majority race of the city. How can loss of civil liberties, loss of status and loss of country be measured in terms of money?

Injustice and discrimination against the British people will only stop when the multi-racial society is brought to an end and the politicians responsible for it are brought to justice.

JOHN PEACOCK

Sir, — It was recently reported in The Daily Mail that "leading producers, writers, actors and actresses" from the art and entertainment world have accused Mrs. Thatcher of censorship and of "cracking down on homosexuals."

This is a response to the recent government move to prevent local authorities using public funds to promote homosexuality in schools and finance local 'gay' organisations.

In fact, one of the gang, actor Ian McKellen, is reported as saying: "The effect on the arts world will be devastating."

To which I can only say that, if the latter is true, it is an indication of the state into which we have allowed the arts to degenerate in Britain. Is our artistic life really so dependent as this on the participation of pansies? If so, God help us!

Of course, it would indeed be good news if Thatcher & Co. were really 'cracking down' on homosexuals. This, however, is far from being the case. The government is only making a half-baked gesture to appease the public opinion that has been outraged by the way in which the gay lobby has hijacked local councils and appropriated their funds for its own use. Were the government not to make some token move to curb this, it would be risking a big loss of votes.

Parents ready to

From Daily Mail, January 8

By GRAHAM DUDMAN

THE mother of the star-struck schoolgirl raped by three men on a secret trip to London is willing to forgive her daughter's attackers.

The mother, a softly spoken professional woman, said last night: "We are a practising Christian family. Part of our belief is to forgive when asked and I would be quite willing to do so."

Her 14-year-old daughter went alone to London from Durham three weeks ago to see her heart-throb, actor Peter Howitt, in a pantomime.

After watching him at the Palladium she was picked up by two Asians, taken to a house in Lewisham, S.E. London, and raped by one of them. Minutes later, wandering the streets lost and crying, she was picked up by two 'Cypriot-looking' men in a red Cortina who drove to a dark alley and took it in turns to rape her again. Then she was dumped in a council depot.

Her mother, speaking for the first time, about her forgive men who raped daughter daughter's ordeal, said: "She is coping surprisingly well now, though it's difficult to know what the future holds."

The fourth-former had met Peter Howitt, who plays Joey in the TV show Bread, since her ordeal. And she was sent a letter by actress Jean Boht, who plays his screen mother.

Stars

"That went a long way in restoring her faith in human nature," said the girl's mother.

"The big stars have been marvellous, as have our friends, the family doctor and our daughter's headmistress. Now we shall concentrate on getting life back to as normal as possible."

A 21-year-old man has been charged with rape and another serious sexual offence.

THE REPORT THAT SAYS IT ALL

★ That the children of intermarriage grow up with complexes and confusion?

If you or your friends are on the brink of intermarriage we plead with you, do not allow a temporary infatuation to ruin your life, the lives of your dear children, and help to destroy our cherished and beloved Jewish people.

If you think you are different please send for our free booklet entitled "Remain Jewish Follow the Jewish Safety Code". It could well save you a lifetime of unhappiness and misery.

The above is a reproduction of an appeal which appeared recently in the Jewish Chronicle. The original, which was nearly twice the width and twice the height of our copy here, was an urgent plea to Jews not to sacrifice their identity as a race through intermarriage with non-Jews.

Isn't the nerve of the Jewish Chronicle truly staggering? For is it not this very paper that, almost every week, has been attacking British Nationalists for the crime of 'racism' — and all because we only want the white, Anglo-Saxon-Celtic British people do practise exactly the same thing as the Jews advocate for THEIR people?

Is this not a clear case of 'one law for us and another law for them'?

committing any such act as the one just described. And any criminal who had done so might have expected virtually to have been lynched.

But then of course Britain was a different kind of nation. Since that time, a variety of influences have conspired to destroy our state of community and undermine our moral fibre.

Although it appears that in this case all the rapists were of some kind of ethnic minority background, it does not follow that the ethnic minorities have a monopoly on rape. There is quite obviously a criminal scum element among the white population, some of whose members might be equally capable of such an atrocity.

At the same time, what is obvious is that the general breakdown of any sense of community in large areas of the country, in which the multi-racial transformation of Britain is so big a factor, provides an ideal environment for all criminals, non-white and white alike, to move.

FLABBY ATTITUDE

But that is not all. There is something else too.

As a sequel to this horrific story, it was reported in The Daily Mail (January 27th) that the mother of the girl who was the victim to these rapes publicly stated that she was prepared to forgive the attackers responsible!

The mother, described in the report as "a softly spoken professional woman," said: "We are a practising Christian family. Part of our belief is to forgive when asked and I would be quite willing to do so."

BNP development programme for 1988

AT A CONFERENCE of senior party officials held in London on the 23rd January, there was an extensive discussion of the question of party development during 1988.

The broad lines of party strategy had already been put forward in a new year's message by the BNP Chairman published in the January issue of Spearhead. A target had been set for a minimum membership growth during the year of 50 per-cent. The main source of this growth must be new members recruited by party literature, which must be distributed in vastly greater quantity than ever before. With this issue of British Nationalist is an up-to-date catalogue of literature available, which it is hoped will be bought and distributed in large quantities by non-members as well as by members.

Any future plans for participation in general elections must rest on the party's ability to achieve a substantial growth in membership.

The acquisition of a party headquarters building within the current year is a target within reach — if everyone pulls their weight and donates money to the maximum extent of which they are capable.

A partial programme of public activities has been decided upon, though this may well be supplemented later in the year. Provisionally, it has been decided that major functions will be held in the following areas and at the following times:-

April: Public rallies in BIRMINGHAM and NORWICH in support of candidates standing in local government elections. Precise dates will be announced later.

July: Visit by a team of BNP activists to BELFAST and other parts of Northern Ireland for annual loyalist ceremonies and to distribute BNP literature.

October: In early part of the month, annual national rally in LONDON.

November 13th: Annual Remembrance Day parade and rally somewhere in the NORTH OF ENGLAND.

Late November: Annual St. Andrew's Day parade and rally, SCOTLAND.

It is likely that other major events will be fitted into the period between May and September, but these will be decided upon later.

As was the case in 1987, the party will this year be devoting much of its schedule to internal education and training sessions aimed at improving the competence of activists and branches in basic activity tasks, and to this end a series of local seminars will be held up and down the country.

The conference referred to also discussed the matter of party propaganda and one of the results of this was the decision to bring out British Nationalist in a new and improved format, the details of which are given elsewhere on this page.

At the conference it was recommended to the party leadership, and the latter accepted, that the member's subscription rate should be raised with effect from 1989 and also that thenceforth a single category of membership be adopted. As from next year, the single category of membership will carry a yearly fee of £12. The 50 per-cent reduction will be available to OAPs and students, as in the past.

Also scheduled to take place this year is the publication of John Tyndall's book, mostly written in prison and now in its final stages of preparation for the printer. The book, as has been announced before, will consist of the most comprehensive analysis yet of the ideology and programme of British Nationalism as applied to modern times. For the next three or four months, preparation of the book will occupy a major part of Mr. Tyndall's time, and all party supporters are asked to make the very minimum demands on him that are necessary, so that this work may be completed with the least possible delay.

"...The subject of race is another vast area of public concern where censorship, often backed by law, operates at a number of levels. Indeed, it can truthfully be said that no newspaper now dares to publish articles which discuss Britain's race problems frankly."

A new BN!

AS FROM THIS ISSUE, we are bringing out a new, enlarged and improved British Nationalist!

The change has been made as a result of a recent BNP party officials' conference as part of which was discussed ways and means of increasing the impact of BNP publicity material.

Part of the improvement lies in the adoption of an extra colour and the incorporation of the Union Jack into the front-page design. This is in response to strong representations from members that the national flag should be so included.

The flag, however, supplements rather than replaces the BNP roundel, while the addition of blue enables us to reproduce the roundel in its correct colours, which are in line with the national colours.

In addition to this, there is also a centre-insert consisting of two extra pages in which an up-to-date list (with illustrations) will be given every month of the latest items of party literature.

All these improvements of course cost money, and in consequence the retail price of the paper has been increased to 20p per single copy to cover increased printing costs, with bulk prices also raised accordingly.

We appreciate that regular readers will, under this new scheme, be asked to pay more for their copies without getting proportionately more in return — as the literature list will not change greatly, if at all, from one issue to the next.

But we feel that most readers will not mind this extra levy. It is vitally important that we advertise our promotional products as widely as possible and as prominently as possible. In effect, readers are being asked to contribute an extra 8p per month to help this advertising campaign and also to help make the sales impact of the paper itself greater through the introduction of the national flag and extra colour.

And remember — this is the first price increase we have imposed on our readers since 1981!

We hope anyway that all will like the new look British Nationalist and willingly do their bit towards increasing its circulation and the circulation of the other BNP products that it promotes.

Building Fund: £6,057 needed!

We are very pleased to announce that the total in contributions to our Building Fund received in the three weeks since publication of the last issue (including pledges of money to come) is £943.

It means that £6,057 still remains to be raised.

We hope that in the next month or so all supporters will dig deep into their pockets and do their very best to help raise much more.

All contributions should be marked 'Headquarters Fund' and sent to PO Box 446, London SE23 2LS.

STICKERS

3-colour round stickers with BNP logo in red, white and blue (self-adhesive). 1 1/4 in. diameter: £2.50 for 50; £4.25 for 500. 2 1/4 in. diameter: £3.50 for 250; £6.25 for 500.

Oblong BNP stickers with party logo and name and address (red on yellow labels) with slogans: (1) A new way forward for Britain; (2) Stop the riots — peace through repatriation; (3) Smash the IRA — keep Ulster British; (4) Join us now! Make Britain a riot-free zone; (5) Our country — love it or lose it! £3.50 for 250; £6.50 for 500; £12 for 1,000.

WHY EVIL IS WINNING

This incredible confession follows shortly on from that of Mr. Gordon Wilson, the man whose daughter was killed in the Enniskillen bombing. He too proclaimed that he 'forgave' the culprits, and moreover he was actually praised for this declaration by no less a person than Her Majesty The Queen in her Christmas broadcast.

We also remember similar sentiments dribbled by the Ealing vicar, who personally witnessed his daughter being raped by one of a gang who burgled his vicarage a couple of years ago.

GONE SOFT

We don't know what our readers think, but, to us, these stories tell a great deal. They tell us, in fact, why the forces of evil in our society are enjoying victory and triumph everywhere while goodness, morality and lawfulness are on the retreat.

Evil is winning because we have gone soft in our attitude towards evil. We no longer seem to have the will to fight it, as is evidenced by these puerile mouthings about 'forgiveness'.

It will be noted that the mother of the girl who endured the triple rape was described as a 'professional woman'. Somehow that figures. For it is among this class of the population that such weak-minded attitudes seem to have taken root most deeply. It contrasts with the case of the man in North Wales two or three years back — from descriptions, not a member of the professional classes — who, after his young daughter had been molested, located the man who was responsible and beat him to within an inch of his life, going to jail as a result.

We feel in fact that the reaction of this man was much more natural and wholesome than those of the 'forgiving' brigade. Such a response may not be, and indeed cannot be, permissible under the law; but it nevertheless reflects the attitude of healthy people in the population, whereas that of the raped girl's mother from the North East of England reflects everything that is sickly and effete in modern Britain.

We will only start to hurl back the rampaging forces of diabolism and criminality when we get rid of these sickly attitudes and declare real war on the enemies of society.

Until that day comes, and as long as the 'forgiving' folk rule our policy, unspeakable crimes such as that to which this innocent youngster fell victim on her secret visit to London are going to be ever on the increase.
